

The HUMAN TRAFFICKING INSTITUTE

Empowering justice systems to decimate modern slavery at its source

ASSOCIATE LEGAL COUNSEL

Kyleigh Feehs serves as Associate Legal Counsel for the Human Trafficking Institute, a non-profit organization that exists to decimate modern slavery at its source by empowering police and prosecutors to stop traffickers. In this role, Kyleigh co-authored the 2017 Federal Human Trafficking Report, a first-of-its-kind resource that provides an exhaustive account of all criminal and civil human trafficking cases handled by federal courts in 2017. Kyleigh also serves as the Director of the Institute's Douglass Fellowship, a nine-month legal fellowship focused on developing future leaders in the anti-trafficking movement and providing resources to those currently combatting human trafficking around the globe.

Prior to joining the Institute, Kyleigh worked for International Justice Mission, supporting the organization's forced labor and sex trafficking offices in South Asia. She has lived in India and Africa, where she worked with trafficking survivors and populations vulnerable to trafficking, coordinated government and law school trainings on human trafficking law, and developed best practices for non-profit organizations that participated in the investigation and prosecution of human trafficking cases in India.

Kyleigh graduated magna cum laude from Wake Forest School of Law. During law school, Kyleigh served with the Justice Department's Criminal Section of the Civil Rights Division and the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Middle District of North Carolina.

Kyleigh lives in Bethesda, Maryland, with her husband, Kenneth, a physician in the United States Navy, and their two goldendoodles.
